Director's Note

We all want our children to perform well in their professional and personal life for which we do whatever we can i.e. admit them in best schools, give them best facilities, however despite all efforts children sometimes lose interest/focus in their studies because of a set teaching pattern, good schools understand this problem and constantly evoke interesting activities in art, music, creative writing and theatre to compliment serious studies and enhance creativity, self esteem self confidence among students and we as parents also constantly motivate them when we see them losing interest or focus in the studies.

But there are many less fortunate children from underprivileged societies who do not have such facilities and in due course of time such underprivileged children lose focus towards studies and hence stop performing well and become dropouts from schools to join their parents in some insignificant jobs as child labor in small shops & houses.

Though these children may have dropout from school but they have abundant talents, intelligence and capabilities to excel in studies and other activities. If someone can understand their problem and give them due motivation, guidance and belief they would surely excel.

Neofusion Creative Foundation is one organization which has deeply understood the problem of such underprivileged children, we know that each and every child is born with talents, if given right guidance, environment and platform such kids can do wonder's in future. Therefore Neofusion Creative Foundation is working to develop interest; self esteem self confidence by creative use of art, literature, music and theatre.

Executive Summary

The education of world's children is high on the global agenda. All children should receive free good quality education. Many NGOs and governmental organization are working on these areas but still UNICEF report says that every year the percentage of school dropouts is increasing. 'WHY'. This is the first question which strikes us. Are NGOs and other governmental organization are not doing their work properly, no we can't say this.

Day by day percentage of unemployment is increasing. Seeing so much of unemployment, students from underprivileged societies and their parent assumes formal education as ineffective in getting them proper employment hence stops going to school and start working with their parents on petty things. Those who are interested in education struggle to pursue it. As every child cannot be a doctor and engineer there are students full of talent in other performing arts also who because of less or no facilities in such fields in their schools become school dropouts.

Good school with high fees structure is able to provide training in other areas like art, theatre and music but small schools without good funding are unable to do that.

Neofusion Creative Foundation's aim is to solve the problem by approaching these schools and communities and motivate them for formal education by making the studies interesting through extracurricular activities. With that, help them to realise their interest area where they can do wonders with their inherent talent and after their training, Neofusion Creative Foundation will provide a platform for them by which they can start earning.

In the first year after incorporation of foundation, Neofusion Creative Foundation developed its formal training model, tried to navigate the challenges of funding facilities, cultivated relationship with local authorities and started its first grooming institute in Jaipur (Rajasthan).

The participating children were from poor families who could not afford the expenditure for admission into such workshops.

This workshop aimed to include poor children who were deprived of such participation and those who wanted to improve their technology skills and learn about latest technology.
